

ROLE: JUNIOR SECURITY ANALYST

We are seeking a Junior Security Analyst to monitor and analyze news, social media, and other information sources for security-related incidents and political developments, with a primary focus on Latin America and other countries of interest.

The candidate will also supervise Junior researchers and provide support to other country services as required.

Who We Are:

Aldebaran is a specialist geopolitical risk and intelligence firm providing decision-makers with trusted intelligence in some of the world's most complex and high-risk environments.

We support governments, multinational organizations, and senior corporate and security stakeholders with timely, high-resolution intelligence on political, security, and economic developments. Our work enables clients to anticipate emerging risks, assess their operational and strategic implications, and make informed decisions in rapidly evolving environments.

Our intelligence is built on dedicated country expertise, established local networks, structured data, and rigorous human-led analysis. By combining continuous monitoring with deep contextual understanding, we provide granular insight into the actors, events, and dynamics shaping the environments in which our clients operate.

Aldebaran goes beyond reporting what has happened. We identify what matters, assess what is likely to happen next, and provide the intelligence clients need to protect their people, operations, and strategic interests.

The Role:

As ATC's Junior Security Analyst, you will be required to accurately collect, classify, map, and report information according to the Company's established methodology. The successful candidate will also take a lead role in the Latin America service, supporting the preparation and publication of alerts, SITREPs, and regular reports while helping maintain the quality and integrity of daily reporting.

Key Responsibilities:

- Review news, social media, and other information sources for security-related incidents and political developments
- Present and summarize information from these sources in English according to the Company's training and reporting standards
- Accurately classify information according to the Company's established methodology
- Accurately map security incidents based on available information
- Ensure timely publication of information within the required reporting timeframe
- Maintain the accuracy, consistency, and integrity of data and reporting for assigned countries
- Lead the Latin America service, including quality control of logs, preparation and publication of alerts and SITREPs, and assistance in producing weekly/biweekly and bespoke reports
- Supervise and guide a team of Junior researchers
- Support other country services through closed-source research and analysis
- Provide additional regional assistance as required

- Coordinate with Company employees and other contractors to maintain a consistent daily reporting schedule

Working Hours:

- Approximately 40 hours per week, coordinated with Company employees and other contractors to ensure continuous daily reporting
- Additional hours may occasionally be required based on the reasonable scope of work and urgent developments
- The Company respects employees' and contractors' time off; however, reasonable communication outside working hours may occasionally be required to respond to urgent developments

What You Bring:

- A background in International Relations, Political Science, Security Studies, Journalism, History, or a related field
- Previous experience in research, security analysis, journalism, intelligence, or a similar role
- Knowledge or experience covering Latin America
- Experience with incident monitoring, political risk, conflict analysis, or security reporting
- Experience supervising or mentoring junior researchers

Why Join Us?

At ATC, we offer the following environment and benefits:

- A diverse and supportive company culture that values respect and celebrates achievements.
- Opportunities for career development and learning through training and certifications.
- Comprehensive medical and wellness care package.
- Paid time off, including 30 days paid annual leave and 10 days paid sick leave.
- Opportunity to travel to countries of coverage and to countries with Aldebaran employee presence.

This position is designed for remote work, but occasional travel for meetings with the team is required.
